PURPOSE AND REQUIRMENTS

Purpose:
The websites purpose is to have songs that people can listen to. I will be making the music. This site will be made to entertain others. The need for this website is that I want a place to show off my music. This was the perfect opportunity for me to present my music and now others can enjoy it too.

Form (what is it):
It is going to be an interactive website, which is going to have music tracks to listen to. The whole point of the site is for the tracks and for people to listen to them.

Potential users:
A potential user of the website is someone who is interested in listening to music. My site will give them a taste of some fun tracks and songs. Another potential user is someone looking for something to do. This website will be oodles of fun and easy to use.
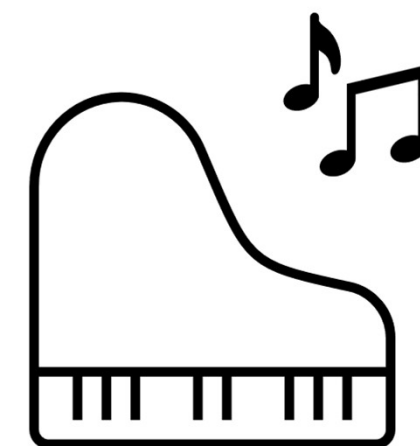

Requirements:
1. The website needed buttons to play the tracks. Otherwise, stakeholders would not be able to listen to the music.
2. The site must have a homepage with a title. It needed to be simple, yet eye-catching for the viewer.
3. The website needed an about-me page. This is because the viewer wants/needs to know about whom created the site and why.
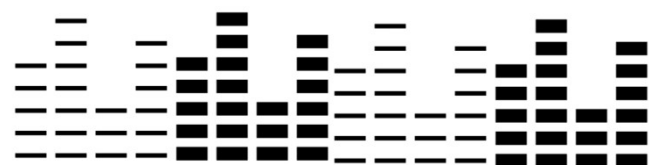

The principals:
Manaakitanga means respect. This will be shown by respecting the user by giving them a pleasant experience on the site. Kaitikitanga means protection. This will be shown by ensuring the website is safe for all kinds of people.

What principal speaks to me and what it means:
If I am to show Manaakitanga during this internal, I decided the site MUST have well designed pages and have simple interactions while on the website. I have also shown Manaakitanga by making the font large so that most people can easily read the text.

Design elements:
A way I can show Manaakitanga while designing is having less details on the page. This will make the site less overwhelming for some individuals. I can also show Manaakitanga by making links on the site easy to see and access, meaning users will have less trouble on he site.

ORIGINAL DESIGN IDEAS

This was one of the first designs for the site. As you can see, It was originally going to be one page. However, to make the site look better and much less cluttered I decided to spread it across 3 pages instead of one.

This is yet another original design concept. In a weird twist, the title was designed to be on the side of the site. This would've been a very interesting design to work one, But it is much too chaotic. Having the title, the about me information and the tracks on the same page would've been a problem.

This image here is a picture of my very first design idea. It is a very simple, easy to make design, that lacks the flair to keep users interested. Without this original concept, I doubt my website would be half of the site it is at this stage.

This page has 3 of my original design concepts. This designing phase was crucial for the development of the site and making the site look as simple yet striking at the same time. These concepts led me down the right track and were extremely useful for the creation of my final design.

This is a screenshot of the page the tracks will be on. I decided to go with the top one. This is because of its simplicity. It also looks less cluttered than the second one.
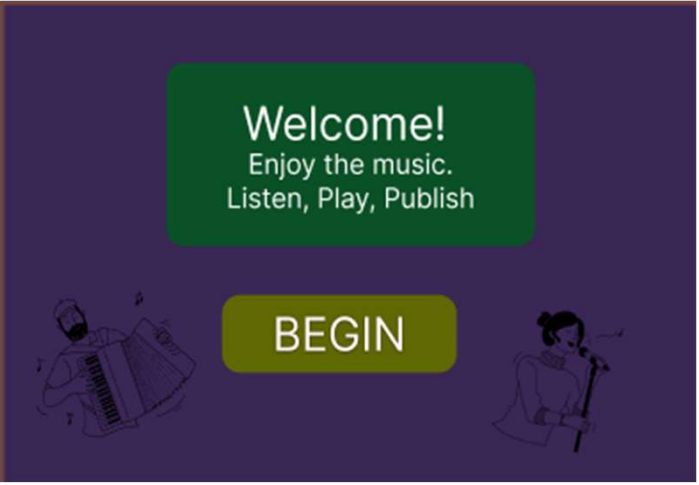

This is the page the viewers first see. I thought It needed to be simple, but eye catching at the same time. This design does both very well. The images show the viewer that this is a music-related site.

Welcome!
Enjoy the music.

This Slide is going through the basic designs of my site and elaborating on the ideas.
The colour scheme I chose was a purple/green mix. These 2 colours together give me a very chill vibe. They are easy on the eyes, but still interesting to look at.

This is a screenshot of the tracks. There is going to be information about each of the tracks next to them. This was me deciding which font to use. I ended up keeping it like this, as it shows diversity and how each track is different.
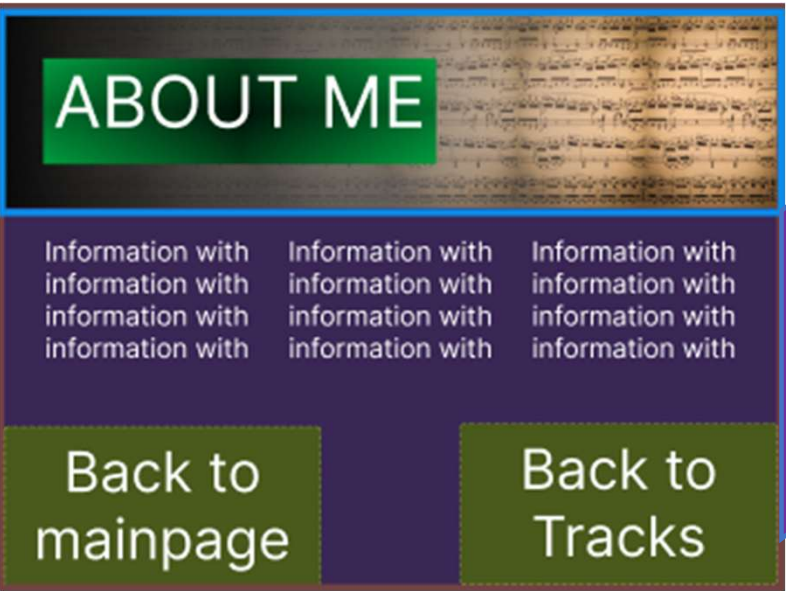

This is the about me page. It needed to have space for information about the site and the buttons to take you back. The title stands out and the buttons are clear. Perfect.

User feedback #1:
The first bit of feedback was considering what device the user would be on. The site is mainly designed for people on computers, but I am thinking about making the site more accessible for more people across different devices.
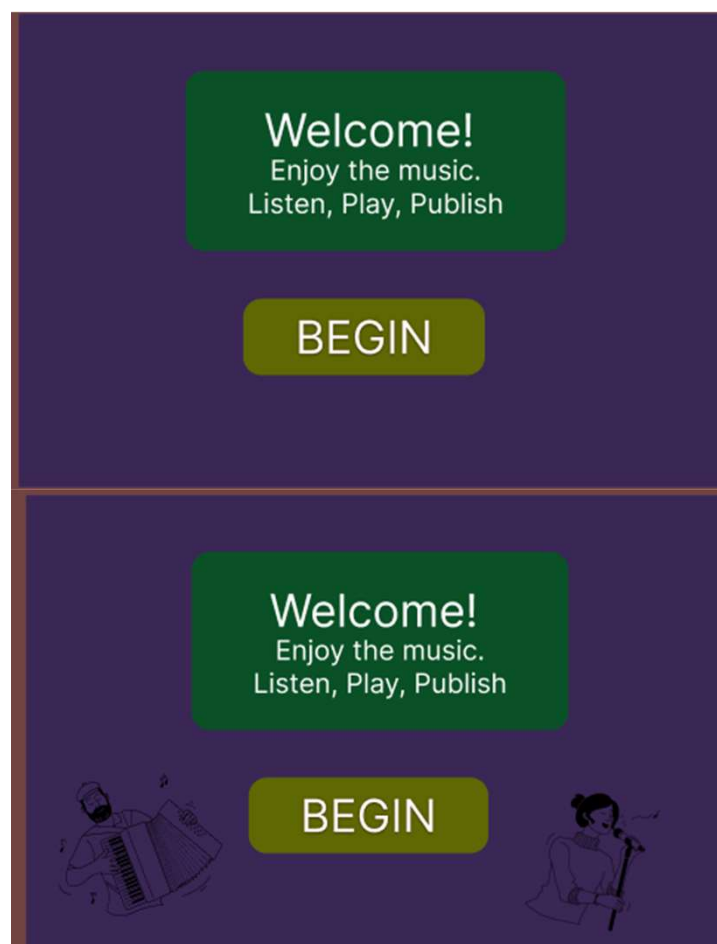

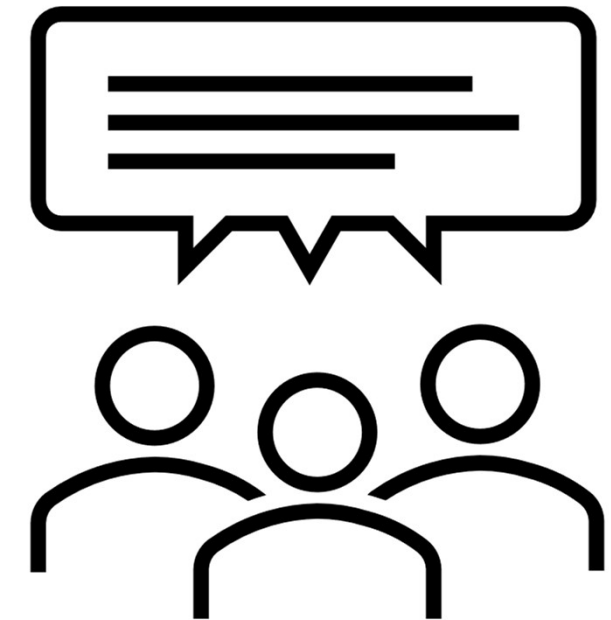

User feedback #2:
The second piece of feedback was the possibly bringing back the old colourful title. I decided to not bring it back but keep the title page simple and easy to look at. This simple design looks good and has a great looking colour scheme.
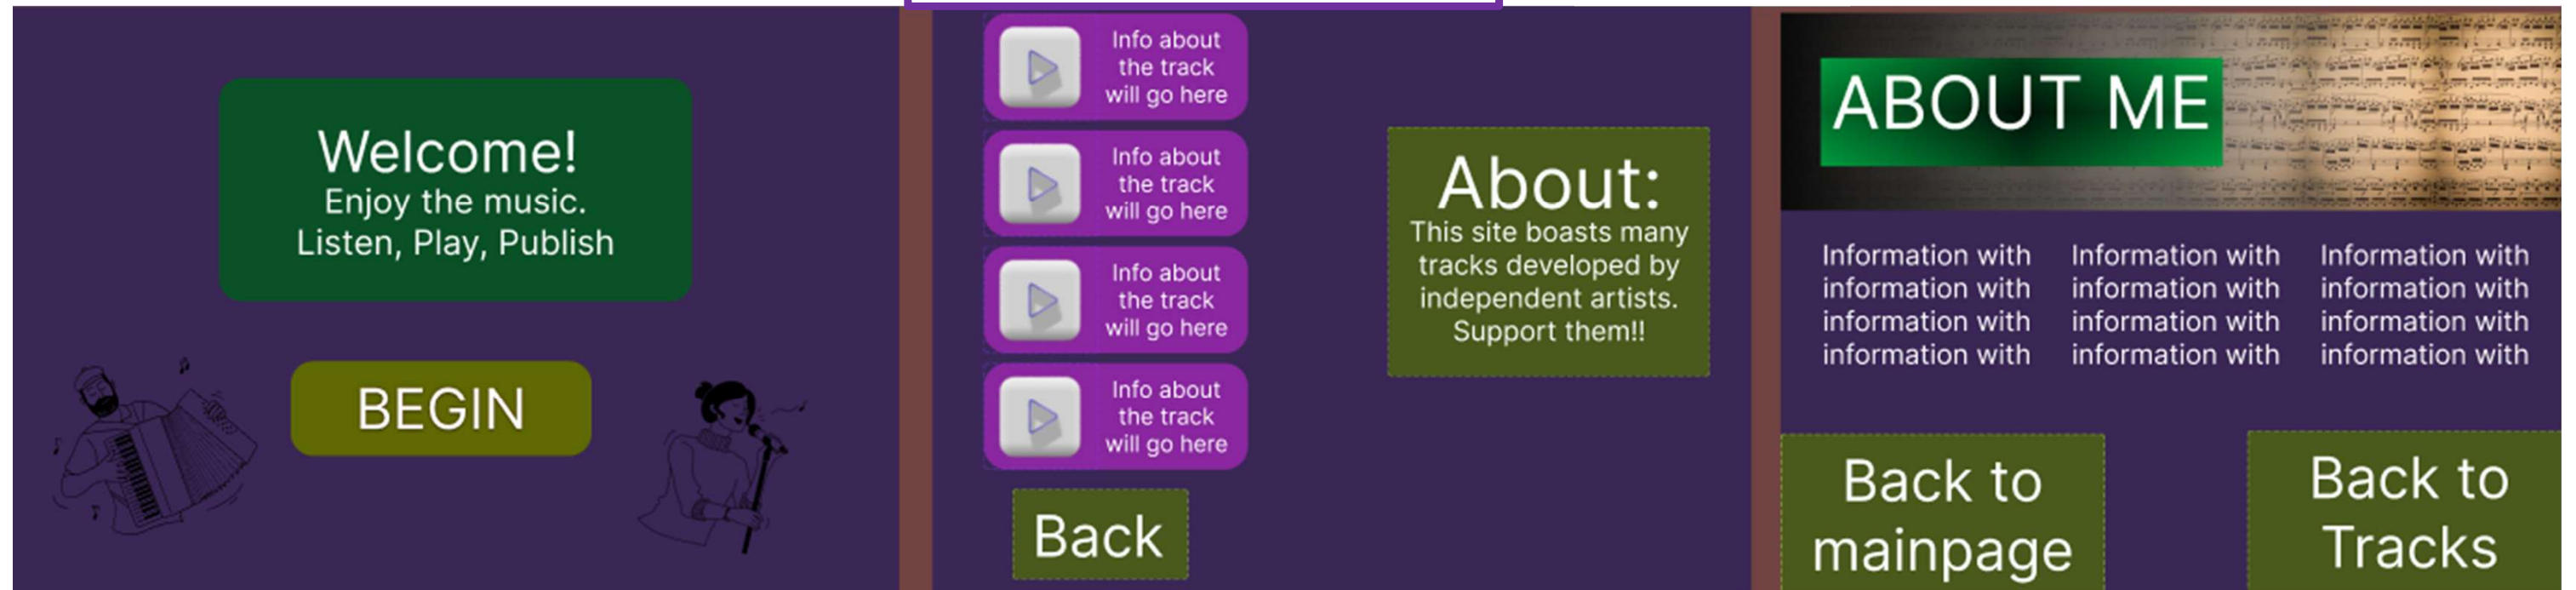

User feedback #3:
The third point of feedback was adding images and sprucing up the site. This was done very well, as I added simple yet striking images and made the titles clear and easy to see. This makes my site look much better and simpler. If the site was too flashy, then some people may struggle to use it.

And this is after adding the images. The images add much more life and add context for my site.
